Editorial: There's still time to give

The annual drive is nearly over and is still $5 million short. At a time of critical need, everyone should pitch in.

Maybe it's a kid who goes to an after-school program. Maybe it's a woman who finds a safe place to stay. Maybe it's a parent who learns new skills.

Your gifts to the United Way of Greater Milwaukee help them all.

The needs are great. More than a quarter of Milwaukee residents live in poverty. A third of older adults live alone. About 40% of teenagers don't graduate from high school.

Your money will be put to good use. The United Way in this community is a three-time recipient of a four-star rating from Charity Navigator, the nation's largest non-profit watchdog group.

The campaign this year is about to conclude, and the push is on to meet the organization's aggressive $42 million goal. Please consider a donation. If you already have given, thanks.

Donors can give to the United Way at their workplace, by calling (414) 263-8100 or by going online at www.unitedwaymilwaukee.org
